

Dan Greenhaus

Dan has been in public safety for over 20 years, as an EMS professional, a firefighter and a 911 dispatcher, and holds instructor certifications in all three disciplines. He worked for several years in the New Brunswick and Newark (NJ) EMS systems, before relocating to North Carolina. Dan is currently a Firefighter/EMT with the Wake New Hope Fire Department, in Raleigh, NC, as well as the department's Public Information Officer, and works as an EMS Instructor within the NC Community College System, regularly teaching EMT initial and continuing education courses for fire departments. He is also a Senior Emergency Services Instructor at Emergency Services Educators and Consultants and can be reached at Dan@ESEctraining.com He holds a Bachelor of Science in Information Management and Technology from Syracuse University.